Forlorn and Widowed: Seaford 1815

Seaford during the French and Napoleonic Wars

From 1793 to 1815, Britain was pitched into a titanic struggle with revolutionary France.

An estimated one in six males saw service and there was a massive boost to Britain's economic and industrial might.

There was political and social unrest too.

But what was happening in Seaford during these years?

To celebrate the bicentenary of the Battle of Waterloo, our new exhibition will give you a glimpse of life at that time.

This exhibition will run through to early 2016

The title "Forlorn and Widowed" is taken from a local newspaper of that period
